

I al-ways drove this way to work;
to-day I'll drive once more,
but I won't come Mon-day mor-ning, they're clo-sing the old plant doors.
They say that they can't make it;
they're pu-lling out you see,
they're mo-ving my job to who knows where
and pu-tting the blame on me.

They're pu-tting the blame,
pu-tting the blame,
pu-tting the blame on me.
They're mo-ving my job to who knows where;
and pu-tting the blame on me.

They talk about quality, as if it's our downfall.
The way they talk about us, you'd think we had no pride at all.
If you saw what they gave us to work with,
and the speed at which they run the line,
It's a wonder we make, anything-at-all,
in such, a little-bit-of-time.

They say that I get paid too much,
and don't produce enough,
and that i'm the reason, profit's falling off.
They made good money off me.
They're making money, still.
Where do you think, they got the cash to go and move this mill.

It's about time that we came forward,
and had our story told,
about all-the-years we gave them,
while they lined their pockets-with-gold.
They may have closed the plant down,
that much you can see.
I'll be damned, if I let them, pin the blame on me.

CHORUS Final (x2):

And we're putting the blame, putting the blame, putting it where it should be.
On the folks who own and run this place,
not on the workers like me.
